

Editorial

The world of literature is always in need of fresh and original voices. As the editorial team of Anukarsh, we are committed to promoting and nurturing the creativity of young writers, and we are always eager to provide them with a platform to showcase their talents. The recently held Creative Writing Workshop and Competition organized by the School of Liberal Arts at Alliance University had created a nurturing and supportive atmosphere for writers from around the country to hone themselves and showcase their writings. This issue will comprise of selected contributions that were made by participants of the workshop. I am thankful to Dr Shamik Chakraborty, Prof. Elizabeth Thomas, and Prof P Devipriya for their support in choosing these submissions for publication.

Writing can be a daunting and sometimes lonely process, and we want to encourage all budding writers, including those who participated in the workshop, to keep writing, keep experimenting, and keep pushing the boundaries of their creativity.
